

Mr. Smallwood Point of order, Mr. Chairman. This man is insulting. This man is completely insulting! Who does he think he is, sir? Does he think his money gives him the right to act like a clown? Who is he anyway? The old fossil!

Mr. Chairman You will both take your seats, please. Take your seat please, Mr. Smallwood.

Mr. Smallwood It is money versus brains, maybe. This man is insulting. I am not going to be insulted. Who does he think he is? I am not going to be insulted by a man merely because he has money. Does he think just because he has money it gives him the right to act like a clown?

Mr. Chairman It is rather late to take issue on the procedure, Mr. Penney. I would remind you we are on clause 22; there is only another clause to be read. If for any reason you were objecting to the procedure which has been employed all the way through, why did you not speak on your rights before?.... I have to enforce the mode of procedure as I understand it....

Mr. Penney I submit to your ruling. But it would be only fair to keep the rest in and let them sit through the sessions too.

Mr. Chairman As long as I have a quorum ... I must go on.

[The committee rose and reported progress. Mr. Higgins gave notice of a question concerning the replacement cost of Newfoundland government property. Mr. Miller gave notice of questions asking whether the federal government would maintain existing railway, coastal boat, telegraph, and postal services without increased cost.]

The Convention adjourned]
