day. He would mention a case. During Province. the revolutionary war the Ministry came | This course adopted by His Excellency down with their Speech, and declared they led to events which rendered it expebe carried on. The Earl of Chatham moved, right in the face of the Ministry and the House of Commons, to discontinue the war. We find the rights of the Lords and Commons are co-equal. Why. then does my hon, friend say they have not the same rules govern us that govern the Imperial Parliament? In all the other Provinces of the proposed Union their Legislative Councils have been the first to act upon it, long before the House of Assemblies of the various Colonies took it up at all. If his hon, friend denied this right to exist, he would ask him at what particular year or century this change was made. If he cannot answer this, he must admit that the right still exists. He objects to this paragraph :-

"We learn with pleasure that Her Majesty the Queen graciously received the address of the Legislative Council on the subject of the Union of the British North American Provinces transmitted to England by Your Excellency."

If the Legislative Council have a right to pass an address, are we not gratified to learn that Her Majesty has been graciously pleased to receive that address. He (Mr. Botsford) says he cannot agree to adopt the third paragraph in the address, because it includes the manner of His Excellency's consulting with his advisers. This is an important matter, for there are many instances of the Lieutenant Governor's consulting with the leader of the Government instead of all the members of unconstitutional. We know that the measures, like the repeal of the Corn address.

House to alter the representation of our House as returned was directly opposed Laws, have been decided without any ccuntry. This was a bill which they had to Union in every respect. Suppose reference to the people. In the same no interest in. They sent it down here, the people had changed and His Excel- manner alterations have been made in and there was no objection raised to its lency's advisers had not; was it not the Constitution of Great Britain. This reception. This House received that right that he should take new advisers, the time of William III. There was no would adopt his views and take the time. No member asked to have it laid responsibility? He did so, and his ad such thing as responsible government before the Committee on Privileges. The visers took the responsibility of dissolvreason the question was not taken upon ing the House, and the verdict of the altered and improved. It has been suffit was because it came in so late in the propie was an approval of their course. Seasion that there was no time to take it My thon. friend says the constituencies of Session that there was no time to take it My hon. friend says the constituencies of necessary by the increase of commerce, up. If they had rejected or amended the Province did not justify the course and sufficiently strong to prevent its the bill, it would not have been because adopted by His Excellency, but only a bursting up as other countries have the oni, twould not have been occurring have been observed in the property of them, and therefore the padone. The representative of the people bring it in, for having received it, they regraph states what cannot be substanding. Nova Scotia have a constitutional had admitted this right. The House of the met this House by a majority of the memlarge not asked to say whether they have important measures in Britain, and this bers, it is a resolution of the House and done or right or wrong, for it is a matter is done in the face of the House of not a resolution of a majority of the which they must settle among them-Commons, and contrary to their opinions | House, and the same parallel holds good and the opinions of the Ministry of the in regard to the constituencies of the

would carry out that war vigorously to dient to dissolve the House. Was it exthe end, and the House of Commons ex- pedient that the eleven constituencies pressed their opinion that the war should that were in favor of Union should remain governed by the voice of the three that were opposed to this measure? If the House of Assembly had not been dishave been misrepresented by a majority of the members of the House, who did not express their views on this question. not the same rights which we have? Do Will he (Mr. Botsford) contend that the rights of the people were endangered by this dissolution? It was the duty of His Excellency's advisers to see that the majority of the people were properly represented, and to do that they must dissolve the House. The people had been hastily called upon to express an opinion upon a great question, and they did so; but they had since changed their views, and an opportunity was given them to send men here to represent their changed views. This was not endangering the rights of the people. Could any Government be justified in saying, we will keep you here for three years longer, for if we dissolve the House we are taking away your rights.

In regard to the fourth paragraph he (Mr. Botsford) says we are called upon here to express an opiniou of approval or disapproval of the manner in which the resolution in favor of Union was carried in Nova Scotia. We are not called selves. We are simply asked to say: do we approve of what they have done? and we are not asked to say whether we approve of how they did it. If they have done what we conceive to be right, we can well say that we approve of the substance of the resolutions, without expressing an opinion as to the manner or mode in which those resolutions were carried; therefore my hon, friend (Mr. Botsford) is not called upon to commit solved the majority of the people would himself in that matter at all. There are a few words in the third paragraph he (Mr. Johnson) thought it would be as well to strike out. The section which says: "Your Excellency may rely with confidence on our cordial co-operation in any measure which may be proposed to accomplish that object." Johnson) thought that was asking too much from the House. It would preclude them from asking for any alterations in any measure proposed. would suggest that they leave out the words, "in any measure which may be proposed." The section would then read, "Your Excellency may rely with confidence on our cordial co operation to accomplish that object."

MR. YOUNG said he still believed, as he did at the close of the last session. that the course pursued by the Legislative Council, in passing a resolution for a Union based upon the Quebec Scheme, thereby endeavoring to force upon the people a measure the people had rejected twelve months before, was wrong. He should, therefore, vote against the second and third paragraphs, upon to do anything of the kind; we are but if the fourth paragraph was amended not called upon to decide whether they as proposed, he might vote for it. He took the proper course in deciding upon had been sustained by a large majority this measure without submitting it to of his constituents in the position he took the people. If he (Mr. Johnson) was in reference to the conduct of the Govasked to say whether it was a constitu- ernment, and in reference to the Upper tional course or not, he should say it Branch of the Legislature. He was was. The representatives of the people satisfied the address would pass without are sent here to exercise their judgment any amendment, by at least four-fifths and think for the peeple, without going of the members of the House, therefore back to the people upon every matter he would say nothing further on the the Council. He says His Excellency's which comes before them. In the Im- subject, but would content himself with not consulting with his advisers was perial Parliament all those important voting against those paragraphs in the